What is it?

Parent involvement in intervention is key to improving outcomes for children with ASD. This project is designed to measure the effectiveness of different components of an internet-based program designed to improve parent involvement in intervention for families of young children with ASD.

What will you do?

Families will complete the following over a 9 month period:

- An initial intake assessment including standardized, observation, and parent report measures.
- Participation in one of three groups over 4 to 6 months: a self-directed training group, therapist-assisted training group, or web-based information and support group.
- A 3 month follow-up assessment
